

IF I COULD INVENT SOMETHING NEW

If I could invent something new, I wonder what it would be. If I invented something new, I could become a famous inventor like Thomas Edison, and people around the world would know me and my inventions.

My invention would be so groundbreaking that people would be shocked and amazed, and many would say, "This invention was made by an ordinary 12-year-old boy!" They would know me as a classic, famous, and talented inventor, and my fame could reach countries all over the world, among both children and adults.

Maybe this could even be a record in human history, remembered for generations to come. They would put up pictures of me and the things I created, and this could be possible because I would keep creating more inventions. I may even become very rich from the inventions I created, earning a large amount of money that could help me and others.

This could make me a millionaire, maybe even a billionaire! At first, I could keep making and making, getting millions every year I create or every time I have created something. This could change how the world works and renovate some of the inventions I have created, helping to solve daily problems and finding solutions, and who knows, it may even bring peace.
