IF I COULD INVENT SOMETHING NEW

Reaching out of bed, he clapped twice and his glasses assembled into his hands. “Good morning, Master.” said AI North. Finding his way to the dinner table, a self-automated robot courageously prepared a five-star meal within seconds.

He was handed his toothbrush by his personal hygiene AI. Circular steps emerged a level higher as a floating staircase to any floor. Ready to start the day, mechanical hands stretched out from the ceiling to fit in his clothes.

He observed from the back of the seat, how his car was auto-driven. It announced each destination to him. Arriving like first class, the car doors welcomed him as he came out. Waving at the crowd with frankness, he stood as an outlier. His enhancement of tech was superior.

His pair of shoes were noticeable due to its intelligence to speak and advise its owner. The entrance door made way for him as the shoes commanded. His wristwatch scanned the rows filled with groceries, and highlighted specific items to be bought. His assistant AI scavenged around retrieving required items.

As a drop of rain reached his shoulders, an umbrella overshadowed him by his assistant. The car doors widened awaiting his entry. Arriving at home, his puppies were cared by self-care robots. His cloak was removed by the mechanical hands.

His laundries were carefully sorted by his assistant AI. He slumped himself on the couch and watched his TV being self-operated. The lights switch by his thought of it. He patiently walked to bed and is tucked in by his assistant. “Good night, Master” said AI North. He has everything in control.

There are lots of inventions to create, but I intend to invent techs that aid in the future of humanity.
