

If I could Invent Something New

“Awele, have you ever thought it would be cool to have a machine that can make food and do chores. Just like in cartoons!” Funke asked. “No, I have not. I do not watch cartoons anymore.” Awele replied. “But still, it would be so cool if we could use it as our inspiration. It would be so funny if the origin of our invention were that!” “I do not have any interest in making things; I want to become a doctor in future.” “Just think about it, it could change us!” At the end of my basic conversation with Funke, I wondered if what Funke was saying was true. Could I really create something while still being a doctor?

For days I dwelled on our conversation. I mean, I do have an idea in mind. Despite my future profession, I always had a problem with taking medicine; It was always something I would look forward to the least while being sick. Every time I gag just at the sight of it. So, I decided to change history by making the world’s sweetest and most durable medicine. “The Best Medicine.”

“The Best Medicine” will probably be the most influential in youth because of its enticing looks and delicious taste. Rather than being any other old medication, it will taste like sugar, candy and sweets and work splendidly. Any after taste left behind will be replaced with the finest savour. It will work like a charm and cure any common illness you might have like the flu, Malaria or a cough. It will be the medical version of Aleo Vera Cream!

A Medicine's primary purpose is to interfere or kill microorganisms that invade the body. Not only will this pill do that, but it will also satisfy the desires of children’s sugar intake. It will also urge the child to consume more of it because of its appealing look.

If my invention was to come to life, I would be extremely delighted. The world needs healthier and cheerful people who can enjoy taking pills without any problems! And thank you Funke for introducing me to a great idea for a wonderful product.
