ESSAY

IF I COULD INVENT SOMETHING NEW.

If I could invent something new it would be a computer.

Why I said so is because every invention or improvement in computer is a step towards the progress of mankind.

Generations of the past could hardly imagine being able to communicate with people on the other side of the globe but there were intelligent minds like; Charles Babbage [1822], Herman Hollerith [1890], John van Neuman [1945] and the rest of them who dared to dream of such brilliant discoveries. We are in an improved and enhanced computer age. I want to invent a new computer in order to enhance the day today activities of man. The computer has a lot of advantages through which a lot of impacts can be created on the younger generations.

As computer is bound to enhance and improve our present and our future living, it is good we obtain a knowledge of the technological reforms at the earliest. Children learn faster and can adapt to changes relatively easy. Therefore, if children are trained during their academic years, they have higher chances of becoming experts in computer. Someone once said that `` an early beginning is always beneficial in the long run ``. it is better to introduce the idea and knowledge of computer sciences to students rather than to see them struggle with the learning and utilisation of computer later in life. Children conversant with computer show improvement in their learning. The use of computer in school benefits the children, it lays a strong foundation for the successful professional life of an individual.

The inclusion of computer in the process of learning makes it an enjoyable activity, of thus inviting greater interest from kids like me.

The administrative process of the school`s can be simplified by the means of computers also, school records and book-keeping about all the students, teachers and other school staff can be effectively and efficiently be stored in the school computers.

Moreover, the school can have a website of its own through the computer. the school should have a smart computer equipped library which through its proper utilisation would lead to a more efficient advanced acquisition of knowledge in the academic field. The introduction of computer can thus, be as a result in decreased use of paper and in putting the school office work into an electronic format. Thus, we see that computer does not only benefits school students but also makes office work less stressful. Computer is a more effective way for the storage and distribution of information. Computers can also be used for working at home.

I Appreciate the people who made us to understand the use and importance of computer and technology as a whole and I hope that this generation and the future generation would find great value in the utilisation and advancement of the computer system.
