

“If I could Invent Something New”

What is inventing? This is the production of something that has not existed before. If I could invent something new, I would invent a little box that will be able to build up a protective barrier. It will be able to secure humans. I would love to name it “Power Barrier” because it would be able to resist gunshots, fire, electrical shock, other natural hazards like earthquake, etc. It would also stop people from drowning, especially those who cannot help themselves. The power barrier would as well, be able to shield vehicles from bomb attacks.

My invention would be of great use for soldiers, bodyguards and firemen. It is advantageous because of its portability. It can be kept inside one’s pocket. This device would automatically activate the protective barrier on sensing danger. It would be active for two months unless deactivated by the user. It will have an inbuilt emergency power-saving mode. But This is to ensure, for instance, that after using it for about two months, something eventually happens to the user; the person can activate the mode and use it for at least a whole day and I believe that this device I want to create can be further developed. It is a solar rechargeable device. In fact, I would want to invent something new so that my name would be known all over the world. I want my name to be part of the world inventors like Karl Benz, Philippe Pates, etc.

My main reason for inventing this power barrier is mainly for firemen, body guards, modern fishermen, cavers etc. This device is intended mainly to assist soldiers in maintaining peace and security in the world. But that is not all. It is so personal that it does not allow third-party access. In other words, it can electrocute anyone who tries to access it from the outside. It captures the biodata of the user. The data captured is for authentication.

In sum, I want to say that this device I want to invent will be more than helpful for us humans. It would reduce the death toll of people dying daily by natural disasters. It would also shun armed robbery as robbers will lose hope when they shoot protected people.
