

“If I could Invent Something New”

Nowadays, the world has its existence based on technology as its backbone. These modern devices have been invented by people who have thought deeply on what would change the world. I would love to have my name in the history books as one of the greatest inventors by inventing a weather manipulating device. It would be attached to a building. It will be able to control the weather around the building. The machine is to alter the weather conditions to one's desired weather condition.

I think the device will have a lot of benefits and maybe some disadvantages. The major benefit is about health issues. There are some diseases which are caused by weather conditions. for instance, rashes and measles in hot weather, also asthma and cholera in cold times. Some of these diseases can spread to a lot of people and results as a problem. The device will help to reduce some of these diseases and health problems associated with bad weather conditions.

The device would help to set good temperatures for public gatherings in stadiums and churches. Football matches could be played in all parts of the world when this device is installed in the stadiums. It would also be useful in food storage as it can create a cool, dry place for food preservation. It is advantageous for farmers as it can help them set good weather conditions for their crops. In cases of drought, this device would cause rain to fall. it would make high temperatures low and vice-versa. It will also be useful to the government, as it would help to alter weather for special events like elections. It would also have a lightning-converter which turns lightning into usable electricity.

The disadvantages of the device are that being careless with the device might lead to its breakdown. Not knowing how to operate and manage the device will also result in its damage.

I strongly believe that this device can help make life more convenient for people, also reducing problems caused by weather conditions especially on human health.
