

“THE SAVING HAND”

(A Life Saving Device)

When I saw my mum scrolling through pictures of missing children who were ages 6 to 14 and had been gone for weeks or months, it really made me sad. I could not imagine being away from home for so long. I thought about what their parents must be going through, which seems really hard. It made me want to invent something that could help families in this situation feel better.

Imagine a world where everyone can feel safe and secure, no matter where they are. The “Saving Hand” is a special device that you wear on your wrist like a watch. It has two buttons that help you in different occasions.

The first button is for calling home. Sometimes you might be far away from family and you may need to talk to them urgently or maybe, you are lost and you want to tell them that you are safe.

The second button is for emergencies. Bad things happen when you least expect them, maybe, you get into a terrible situation or you see someone else who needs help. When the button is pressed, it sends an alert to the emergency service, they will know exactly where you are and locate you.

In order to further enhance the security of the user, the device has a password which only the user can use to unlock it off the wrist. This feature prevents strangers from snatching this device off the owner’s wrist. If they try to do this, an alarm will go off and people around the vicinity will be aware of the situation. Also, it will send emergency notification to the emergency service.

In conclusion, the Saving Hand is a wonderful invention that can make lives safer and more connecting. With just two buttons, it can call home or emergency help, making sure that help is just a “press away!”
